CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.
HE EXPIRES SUDDENLY AFTER LYING DOWN.

(By Telegraph to Virginian-Pilot.)
Hartford, Conn., Oct. 20.—Charles Dudley Warner, of literary fame, one of the owners of the Hartford Courant, died suddenly this afternoon. Mr. Warner had a very severe attack of pneumonia two years ago while in New Orleans and has never fully recovered from it. Last spring he had pneumonia again while at his home and this had weakened his heart. Of late he has been much better. At noon to-day he attended a luncheon to bid farewell to some friends about to leave for the Mediterranean. Mr. Warner was cheerful and gave no indication of illness. After the luncheon Mr. Warner started on a walk.

Among his acquaintances was a colored man, to whom Mr. Warner gave books to encourage his desire to read, particularly books connected with the history of the colored race, upon which he is an authority. Mr. Warner probably intended to call upon this man as he was in the neighborhood of his house when stricken. Probably feeling ill he asked leave at a house to sit down, then to lie down, requesting to be called in ten minutes. When the woman of the house went to call him he was dead. News of his death spread rapidly and was a great shock to his many friends.
